TRAVEL LOGUE

Travelogue is a typeface based on a hand-drawn masthead from the 1946-47 editions of Victor Green's Green Book. The Green Book was a classifieds-based travel guide for African-Americans in the United States to provide safe routes for traversing the socially dangerous roads across a nation and advertising welcoming establishments for vacations, overnight stays, or short stops for dining or restroom breaks. The titling typeface is meant to represent the strength and persistence of Black life through travel and experience. The personality of the letterforms and the contrasting weight serves as a nuanced testament to varied life experiences of a people during that timespan.

THROUGH THE AGES, MEN OF ALL RACES HAVE MOVED FROM PLACE TO PLACE. SOME TO SEEK NEW LANDS, OTHERS TO AVOID PERSECUTION OR INTOLERANCE, AND STILL OTHERS FOR THE SAKE OF ADVENTURE.

TODAY, MEN OF ALL RACES CONTINUE TO MOVE (AND FOR MUCH THE SAME REASONS), THOUGH SINCE THE DAYS OF THE FOOT-TRAVELER AND THE OX-CART, THEY TRAVEL WITH MUCH MORE CONVENIENCE AND COMFORT—AND AT FAR GREATER SPEED!
